BRUCE GARMAN CALLED HOME

Died On Saturday Morning at One O'clock

MANY WARM FRIENDS

Immressive Services Held In the St. John's Episcopal Church Conducted by Rev. Edwin Richardson-The Large Edifice Crowed With Loving Friends.

MANY BEAUTIFUL FLOWERS SENT.

Within the past few years we have been called to write the passing away of many of our most prominent men, cut down in the vigor of life when they have just achieved and not had time to enjoy their honors and wealth—the worlds measures of success. We feel they have passed before their time and are yet more sure of this in the passing of a man younger,—in the early thirties—ambitions and with ability to win all they have won. Might we not better philosophize as Cicero, "What time? Is it that of Nature? But she, indeed, has lent us life as we do a sum of money, only no certain day is fixed for payment. What reason then to complain if she demands it at pleasure, since it was on this condition that we received it."

Sudden and worthy of regret was the death of Bruce Garman. About two weeks ago he took sick with heart trouble, at times the greatest hopes were entertained for his recovery and then he would grow worse again. Last Tuesday night he began growing weaker and the family was told by the physicians that he could not get well and still afterwards be rallied and seemed cheerful and better, but Saturday morning, just at a quarter of one the peaceful angel of death called away the soul. Without a struggle or a murmur he quietly slept away. When the end came it was hardly noticeable.

Bruce was widely known all over Centre county and in fact throughout the state. He was a broad hearted, genial, all around, good fellow, eagerly vigilant in his business interest, he was deservedly popular as a member of four or five organizations of the town, no one had ought to say against him, while all who knew him, had the most profound esteem and respect for him.

For fifteen years he has been connected with the hotel business in Bellefonte. Six years he with his two brothers Allen and Cornie, and then Allen moved away from Bellefonte and for eight years Cornie and Bruce were partners in the business, and for the past year Bruce has had full charge of this popular hostelry himself which he has conducted in a most successful manner.

Charles Bruce Garman a son of the venerable Daniel Garman was born in Bellefonte (within fifteen feet of where he died) He was 34 years old on the 25th day of December 1906. He was married to Miss Sabra Campbell five years ago last November. No children were ever born to this union. He leaves to mourn his death his loving wife, and father who is quite ill and the following true and loving brothers and sisters, Edwin F., Allen, Mrs. Isaac Maitland, of Williamsport; Ira D., of Philadelphia; William H., Mrs. Rebecca Cruse of Bellefonte; Robert of Tyrone; C. M. of Atlantic City.

He was a member of the St. John's Episcopal church and of the Order of Elks, of Lock Haven. The Improved Order of Red Men, Knights of Maccabees of the World, the Undine Fire Company; and of the Panther Hunting Club of Bellefonte. This is the first death in the Garman family since the passing away of his mother on August 4, 1886, and also the first death in the Bellefonte department of Elks and of the Knights of Maccabees.

THE FUNERAL.

The St. John's Episcopal church was filled to its utmost Monday afternoon at two o'clock with kind and loving friends of the late Bruce Garman who gathered to pay a last tribute of esteem and respect for this young man who passed away so young in life. Many eyes were bedimmed with tears as the good Rector read the funeral service and the beautiful and impressive hymns sung by the choir. Reverened Richardson met the body and friends at the church door and proceeded up the isle repeating:

"I am the Resurrection and the Life, saith the Lord; he that believeth in me, though he were dead, yet shall he live: and whosoever liveth and believeth in me, shall not die.

I know that my Redeemer liveth, and that He shall stand at the latter day upon the earth: and though after my skin worms destroy this body, yet in my flesh shall I see God: whom I shall see for myself, and mine eyes shall behold, and not another.

We brought nothing into this world, and it is certain we can carry nothing out. The Lord gave, and the Lord hath taken away; blessed be the name of the Lord." After which the 39th and 90 Psalms were sung and the lesson read from the 50th chapter of the first Epistle of St. Paul to the Corinthians. "Abide With Me Fast Falls The Eventide," and "Oh Paradise! Oh Paradise!" That Doth Not Crave For Rest" was sung by the choir in a manner that touched every heart in that large edifice. An earnest prayer was offered by the pastor, and then the funeral cortege moved to the cemetery. When the casket was being lowered into the tomb. Rev. Richardson said "Forasmuch as it hath pleased Almighty God, in his wise providence to take out of this world the soul of our deceased brother. We therefore commit his body to the ground, earth to earth, ashes to ashes, dust to dust,; looking for the general Resurrection in the last day, and the life of the world to come through our Lord Jesus Christ; at whose second coming in glorious majesty to judge the world. The earth and the sea shall give up their dead; and the corruptable bodies of those who sleep in Him shall be changed, and made like unto His own glorious body; according to the mighty working whereby He is able to subdue all things unto Himself,"

The body reposed in a beautiful silver gray Imperial couch casket which was literally covered with fragrant flowers sent by kind friends as a last remembrance of the one who had passed beyond.

A large anchor of roses and lillies with the word "Undine" was sent by the Undine Fire Company. A cresent and star by the Red Men, a pillow of roses by the Knights of the Maccabees, a large bouquet of roses from the Elks, and one of carnations from the Gentlemen at the hotel, and a wreath of ivy leaves and roses from the Panther Run Hunting Club of which Mr. Garman was an enthusiastic member. One of the prettiest floral pieces was two cycas leaves with 34 roses representing the age of the young man, sent by friends. A large boquet of roses and carnations from Mr. and Mrs. Maitland, Easter lillies from Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Harper, lillies and carnations from Mr. and Mrs. Richard Garman, a wreath of ivy leaves, lillies, and roses from the B. P. O. E. 182 of Lock Haven. Mrs. O'Riely, casket boquet of roses and Mrs. C. B. Garman, a casket boquet of carnations.

Both Fire Companies, the Elks, Red Men, Maccabees and the Hunting Club attended the funeral in a body. The casket bearers were Messrs. John Trafford, Frank Shugert, Wilbur Baney, Simion Baum, Harry Walkey, James Nolan, George Jodon and George Thomas. Interment was made in the family plot in the Union cemetery.

Among the many people from a distance who attended the funeral were Mrs. Samuel Hare and Mrs. Orner of Altoona, Misses Rebecca and Edith Garman of Jersey Shore, Messrs. Richard Garman of Philadelphia, C. M. Garman of Atlantic City, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Garman of Tyrone, and J. S. Rummel of Youngstown Ohio, George Uzzle of Snow Shoe. Messrs. Charles E. Robb (The Exalted Ruler of the Elk Lodge), Torrence Shearer, T. A. Lucas, H. A. Leinbach, Chas. Schwamm, Wm. Seiter of Lock Haven, William Bouse Train Master Tyrone Division of the P. R. R., L. T. Stratiff, John Chamberlain, Prop. of the Garman House of Tyrone, Joseph Ard, wife and son, Mr. Herberling, Alec Archey, of Pine Grove Mills. Mrs. B. C. Achenbach of Lock Haven, O. C. Campbell of Barnesboro.

The hotel bars throughout the town were closed from 1 until 3 o'clock out of respect of the deceased.

METHODIST CONFERENCE

Appointments of Ministers of Central Pa.

TYRONE Pa. March 26.

Rev. Benjamin Conner the Presiding Elder of this District. Rev. James B. Stein Returned to Bellefonte. Other Appointment in the County.

REV. STEIN CORDIALLY WELCOMED.

Promptly at 8:30 Thursday morning Bishop McDowell, assisted by the presiding elders, conducted the sacramental service which was impressive.

At 9:15 the conference was opened in business session by the Bishop calling for the reading of Wednesday's journal and the roll was called for the second day. Rev. H. L. Jacobs moved that when conference adjourns it meet at 2 p. m. to listen to the missionary sermon by Rev. E. A. Pyles.

The thirteenth question was resumed and Rev. R. H. Gilbert D. D., presiding elder of the Danville district, read his report.

Rev. Dr. Gilbert, summarizing his work in administering the affairs of the Danville district comprising fifty-four charges and one mission, reported holding 212 quartely conferences, nearly the entire list. The ranks of his regular ministry remains unbroken by death though two local preachers and about 175 of the laity passed away. In spiritual achievement, about 800 conversions were noted. 798 being the number received into the church on probation. Three charges each rejoiced in more than forty conversions, five more in over thirty, nine more in over twenty, and twelve more in over ten.

For building and improvements the goodly sum of $14,500 was raised and upon old debts about $12,100 has been paid. Dr. Gilbert went into the accomplishmentf of the several charges very fully. He stated that the work of the "Anthracite mission is opening up creditably. A new $10,000 church is nearing completion at Benton. About $10,000 was raised at St. Paul's, Hazleton, over half being applied to the church debt. There is a new parsonage for the Janesville charge. Dr. Gilbert pleaded for general support of the Second church Shamokin, which strategic point, he declared, "must be saved!" A splendid new parsonage is reported for the Catawissa Avenue church, Sunbury. Dr. Miller has had a remarkable year of debt paying at Shicksbinny. Other improvements and good work on charges of the district were appreciatively recorded.

The organization of the conference was taken up. Rev. J. F. Anderson, of Patton, was unanimously re elected secretary by acclamation. He nominated E. R. Heckman as recorder and M. C. Piper, William Brill and J. S. Sousser as assistants. John Horning, of Costello, was elected treasurer and nominated his assistants. J. E. Breneman was elected chief statistician with an able corps of assistants.

The names of the members of the conference who have died during the year were called by the secretary, the conference standing, and Bishob Mc Dowell lead in a very tender prayer.

The following resolutions were adopted by standing vote.

We extend to Bishop McDowell a cordial welcome to our conference as our president, and express most earnestly the desire that our association may be mutually pleasant and profitable.

We also most heartily welcome Bishop E. G. Andrews who has frequently and able presided over our conference.

We recognize most appreciatively our continued obligation to this hospitable town and church for entertaining us two years in succession.

M. E. SWARTZ,
M. N. WALKER
J. EMORY WEEKS.

Tyrone, March 26.—In an address instructing the ministers in their personal life. Bishop William F. McDowell, presiding officer at the Central Pennsylvania Conference, Monday morning advised the ministers under him to avoid debt and dishonesty in money matters as they would the devil. "A minister that owes a penny that he can pay and does not is not fit to wear the cloth," he remarked. He also told the ministers to avoid personal uncleanliness and indifference in dress, both being great impediments to a minister's success.

Upon a vote of the conference the method of investigating cases in which ministers wishing to make a change in their conference relation will be changed. In the past the investigations were made by the entire conference body. In the future this work will be done by a committee of fifteen. The forty superannuated ministers who during the past year have been drawing a portion of their support from the conference claimant fund were continued on the list for the coming year.

The subject of the next conference coming, invitations were presented on behalf of York, Clearfield and Harrisburg. York was chosen by a large majority, the acceptance being made unanimous.

The Board of Stewards presented their report. The total receipts for the year were $12,803.58, an increase of $713.85. An appropriation of $11,000 was laid for next year, $2200 for each of the five districts. Dr. Camden M. Coburn, of Allegheny College, Meadville, closed the afternoon session with a lecture on "New Light on the Old Bible."

The Nittany Furnace.

The work at the Nittany Furnace is progressing rapidly and inside of a couple of week the large plant will be in operation putting out more and better iron than ever. The entire lining had to be taken out which caused an immense lot of work and expense. One piece of metal drawn out weighed almost 16 tons. The brick work is being done by the renowned Wallace Brothers of Milesburg.

Should be Made Stand the Expense.

The person who sent in the fire alarm Saturday should be made stand the expense of getting the companies out. The idea of sending in an alarm for a lot of grass burning in a field. That means about $10.00 more expense for the borough to pay.

WE DON'T CLAIM HIM.

Forger Claims to Have Lived in Bellefonte.

ARRESTED IN PITTSBURG

F. B. Clark Who Was Arrested for Forging Checks for Large Amount of Money, Says he Formerly Lived in Bellefonte

BELLEFONTE CITIZENS ARE HONORABLE

Taken from his apartments in the Colonial-Annex hotel in Pitteburg Saturday, F. B. Clark, a promoter, who is alleged to have passed worthless checks in Altoona, was locked up in a cell in the police station. Charges of obtaining money under false pretense and larceny by bailee have already been made against him. It is said that charges will be made against him.

Clark, who is a stylish dressed man of about 55 years, came to Pittsburg four weeks ago and engaged a pretentious suite of rooms at the Annex, said the Gazette Times Sunday morning. He claimed to be promoting the stock of the Central Coal & Coke Company of Clearfield county, and is said to have sold one man $765 worth of the paper. His convincing manner carried weight, and he is alleged to have passed two worthless checks on the Colonial-Annex for $225 and $50, the latter being made out in favor of a department store. He also is alleged to have passed worthless paper on L. T. Clarke, for $175 and $200, to have obtained $550 worth of jewelry, three rings and a pin. The checks were made out in the Farmers' and Merchants' National bank of Tyrone.

Cark was arrested Saturday at the hotel by Detective Homer Crooks and Frank Morgan and taken to Central station. It was later discovered by an examination of the papers in his room that Clark was the organizer of the Central Coal & Coke Company, which had been incorporated in Delaware. The coal land is on the Flick farm in Clearfield county, and was opened 12 years ago, but has never been worked, it is said to any extent. Clark's wife, according to his story, is one of the heir's to the property, and he had obtained the consent of all the other children except Mrs. Sadie Scott, a sister-in-law, for a deed to the coal mine. Among his effects were impressive looking certificates.

Clark said he came east from San Francisco after the earthquake, and has lived in Tyrone and Bellefonte.

SENATORIAL COMMITTEE IN TOWN.

Investigates the Bellefonte Hospital and Will Recommend the Amount Asked For.

The special State Senatorial committee appointed to investigate the various hospitals in Pennsylvania for the purpose of furnishing data concerning the regular appropriation came to Bellefonte Friday afternoon and proceeded immediately to the hospital, accompanied by a number of the directors and physicians of the town. The institution was gone over carefully and its needs noted. There does not seem to be any question but that the committee will report favorably concerning the amount asked for, both for maintance and rebuilding, which is $17,000 dollars. $7,000 for maintance and $10,000 for rebuilding. To a reporter of this paper Senator Sweeney of Luzerne county, Secretary of the committee said, "We will report favorably on the amount asked for as your hospital is certainly crowded and you need a larger building." The Senatorial Committee was met at the train by Dr. George F. Harris, Dr. J. M. Locke, George R. Meek, Dr. R. G. H. Hayes, W. Harrison Walker, Esq., Col. E. R. Chambers, Col. Jno. A. Woodward and John Rowe.

Included in the delegation that visited Bellefonte were, Senators Catlin, J. A. Sweeney, Robt. J. Cunningham, Luzerne; E. M. Herbst, Berks; Senator Dimeling was detained in Philipsburg.

They visited State College during the afternoon and reached Bellefonte during the evening and an informal reception was held at the Bush House until the 8:16 train left which took them to Williamsport and from there they will go to Sunbury.

LIQUOR LICENSES GRANTED.

Garbrick and Moerschbacher Turned Down—Milesburg Tavern Held Over.

Judge Ellis L. Orvis handed down his decisions on the license question Friday morning. Most all the old applications were granted with the exception of Kohlbecker and Austin at Milesburg, they were held over,

Lewis E. Stover of Coburn was a lucky man as a fierce fight was waged against him by some of the citizens of that town and his license really has been the most doubtful of any—but he is in the swim. Captain Philip Garbrick and Charles Moerschbacher were both turned down and for another year outside wholesale houses will reap the benefit of selling the booze to the Bellefonte dealers.

Harry Simler of Philipsburg, Daniel Schnars and Tempest Slinger of Rush township, John A. Kelley and Harry T. Hamilton, of Osceola Mills are the ones including Garbrick and Moerschbacher who got turned down.

To bad boys you may just as well have had license as the rest. This will save a great many minds for another year and those who have been refused can get down to hard work and make a livelyhood in some other way.

JACOB FROM MAKING RUGS.

Busy From Morning Until Night Weaving Carpet Rags.

Jacob From the accused murderer is a carpet weaver. Perhaps it is the best work the fellow can do, so as to keep his mind from pondering on this accusation. He was taken out of the steel cell where he had been the past eighteen or twenty days and placed in the one his son occupied He says he spent a whole day scrubbing the floor and side walls and now has his little cage as clean as a pin. We talked to Jake Thursday night and in his conversation he repeated much that we have already printed. He felt uneasy in regards to a paragraph that appeared in one of the County papers and asked us to explain what they meant.

It is as follows:—"As will readily be seen, the most damaging of the circumstantial evidence given against Mr. From was taken from his own lips. If he has not already done so, it would seem that if left alone to speak at will, he may yet succeed in placing the rope around his neck."

The rugs Jake is making are very pretty and the workmanship is very neat and well done, and woven by hand. He is going to make several for different people throughout the town, and expects to be busy with them until his trial comes off.

Anna Stuart Dead.

Anna Stuart a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Stuart of Bellefonte died on Friday of last week at Newark, N. J., of a tumor. The body was brought to Bellefonte Monday at 2 o'clock. She was 28 years of age, and was a very good christian young lady.

The funeral services were held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Stuart on Linn street, conducted by Rev. Harrington of the A. M. E., church. Interment was made in the Union cemetery.

A Self Annihilated Suitor.

By Jeannette Walden.

Copyright, 1907, by G. D. Daniels.

"A man must be willing not only to efface himself, but to blot himself out of existence if necessary, for my sake."

Jean Boyce made this statement without premeditation, driven to it by sheer ennui. It was the third time that she had been called upon to give her reason for not acquiescing in Maurice Ankeney's belief that they were made for each other, and this time she wanted it to be final.

They had just turned the corner into her home street. Jean hastened her steps as she spoke, with a little laugh of impatience.

Maurice Ankeney looked at her first with disappointment in his frank blue eyes, then speculation and at last amusement. "Could you care that much for any one?" he asked coolly.

"Oh, no"—her tone was matter-of-fact—"I couldn't! It isn't in me."

"Oh, I see. You demand it as a complementary quality in others."

He continued his scrutiny of her face as a smart trap with a man and woman in it rounded the corner. The woman—a stoutish blond with a mountain of lavender plumes on her head—was driving.

The warm color that came to Jean's cheeks as she returned the man's recognition deepened as the trap rolled past, for she knew that Maurice was watching her, and she felt the new, strange intentness in his gaze.

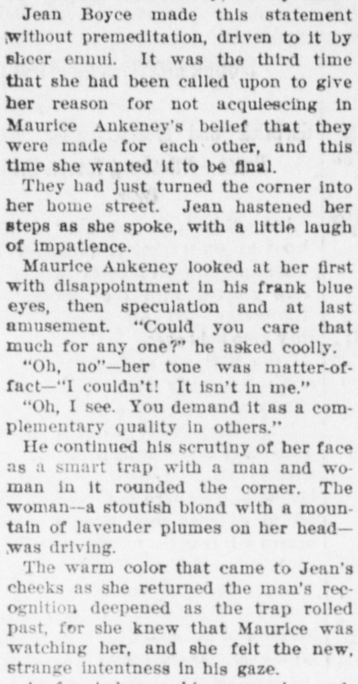
As for Ankeney, his expression suddenly became a mixture of calmness and stern determination. "I'll do it!" he exclaimed. And for this apparently eccentric remark he was rewarded by an electrifying look of inquiry from a pair of dark eyes.

"Do what?"

"Efface—I mean extinguish—myself by getting him for you."

The dark eyes became inscrutable.

"If you want Harold Buckley, you shall have him," he continued precipitately as they mounted the steps of



ANOTHER AUTOMOBILE CAME TOOTING UP BEHIND THEM.

Jean Boyce's home. "It will be an easy matter. He is only dazzled by her millions. It's you he really cares for. Madge Racer has no right to buy"—

"Maurice Ankeney, I'll never speak to you again." As Jean faced him with this emphatic announcement her blushes were fully accounted for by her anger.

"All right. I might as well die one way as another," and he was gone.

In the days that followed Jean Boyce had a new experience. Maurice Ankeney had never stayed away so long before, and she had missed him, a condition she had not thought possible. Still there was the counteracting annoyance of Harold Buckley and the heiress. It is true, she never realized that she cared for Buckley until she found that he was out of her reach. But Jean's self analysis could go no deeper than this, and her state of mind became chaotic once more, when one afternoon Harold Buckley called.

Jean's resentment was not wholly dispelled by Buckley's keenly correct valuation of the heiress. "She was fishing for a husband," he said, "and it's a good thing just to know such women. It makes one expert at estimating character."

Jean interpreted this last remark, "A man does not need to be bitten more than once," and she found herself wondering why she did not feel flattered by his confidence. Still she felt gratified by her triumph in bringing him back. She did not understand until afterward why his next remark quenched her elation.

"She has Maurice Ankeney on her hook now, or, rather, he took her by storm. I never saw a fellow maneuver so." He spoke contemptuously. "But he's welcome."

"How small of him," observed Jean. Then all at once she thought of Maurice's strange promise to her, and she wondered— No, it could not be. He only wanted a cloak for his mercenary ambitions.

Jean did not feel altogether complimented by the ease with which Harold assumed his old relations. Still, when he asked her to take an automobile ride that same evening she accepted.

Her pride in Harold Buckley's personal attractiveness was extended to his splendid machine as they went bounding over the road with a red October sunset in their faces.

Another automobile came tooting up behind them and passed them on the road. It was occupied by Madge Racer and Maurice Ankeney.

The vague depression that had been haunting Jean became poignant. She felt misused.

"Queer taste he has," she observed, with a curl of her lip. Then to hide her pique she conjured a spirit of daring.

"Oh, let's pass them! Do, do!"

Harold Buckley, ready to please her or possibly for reasons of his own, entered into the sport and put on power with great abandon.

Jean was almost delirious with the excitement of swift motion. "How jolly"— Then came a sudden jolting and a desperate adjusting of brakes. They had struck a rocky place in the road. Before Harold could slow up Jean was almost shaken from her seat. The sun's rays, on a level with their eyes, blinded them. There was a loud report, a scream from Maurice Ankeney's auto, which they had grazed in stopping, and they toppled over into a shallow ditch, with an extra tire hanging to one of their wheels.

Jean felt a sharp pain in her arm as she picked herself up; then the diversion of what followed made her forget herself. The blond heiress followed up her screams by an attack upon Harold, who had just extricated himself whole from the ditch.

"Mr. Buckley, this is a great way to drive!" she cried in her high voice with its slightly foreign accent. "Why don't you look at your road?"

But she was instantly mollified by Harold's abject apologies and shook hands with him quite sweetly.

Maurice, who had got to work without loss of time, had almost finished putting on a new tire when Jean felt so faint that she had to sit down on the grass. The pain was coming back into her wrist.

It was just then that Maurice Ankeney happened to look over his shoulder. He burst out roughly to Harold, who was still busy with the heiress, "Don't you see the girl is hurt?"

He got to her first, but in a second they were all bending over her. She assured them that it was only a sprained wrist.

Maurice gave Buckley his handkerchief, ordering him to bandage the injured arm tight, and flew back to work again at the tire.

Jean received a feverish impression through her pain that there was a parley and almost an altercation. Maurice seemed to be out of patience with everybody, and the heiress played him a close second. Jean couldn't see all the time, but she heard Madge Racer's voice grow shriller and shriller.

"No; Mr. Buckley must take the back seat with Miss Boyce. I'll ride in front."

But Mr. Buckley said that some one must stay with the disabled machine. It came hastily to Jean that he suggested Maurice as the one to do this. At this Madge Racer insisted that they take Buckley's auto in tow.

After what seemed hours to Jean she felt herself lifted up in somebody's arms, and the next thing she knew the wind of rapid motion against her face brought everything clear to her. Maurice at her side looked back grimly over his shoulder and swore under his breath.

"All right?" he questioned, seeing her looking at him. "Guess I surprised them this time. She thought I was going to wait to take Buckley in tow, with you about to keel over there on the ground."

"But I didn't keel over." Her voice sounded far away.

"Oh, no, you didn't. You're game. I'd like to see the heiress in the same fix."

There was so much of genuine admiration in his look and tone that Jean took new strength for a moment. She must have been weak, too, or she would not have said what she did next.

"Do—do you really care for her money?"

Maurice gave her a sharp, quick look. "You must be out of your head," he muttered as he bent again over the guide wheel.

When he was ready to leave her at home, after the sprain had been cared for and the color was creeping back into her cheeks, he stood over her couch and asked humbly:

"Am I sufficiently blotted out?"

"I think you are," she laughed.

"But I'd like you to be sure," he insisted.

"I am sure," declared Jean, and the look that came into his blue eyes told her that he was satisfied.

Trespass Notices.

"Here is a curious notice which appears on a sign near Saddleworth church, known to fame as the burial place of the victim of the Bills o' Jack's murder," writes a Manchester correspondent. "It is a bold attempt to escape the conventionality that imposes itself on other property owners: 'The law comes down with a heavy penalty on any person found trespassing on this land.'"

It is only a verbal improvement on the time honored falsehood "Trespassers will be prosecuted." We prefer the authoritative announcement that used to appear in the grounds at a certain learned judge's country place in the last century. It ran: "Trespassers cannot be prosecuted unless they pursue game or do willful damage. But reasonable force may and will be used to remove trespassers, and they are liable to an action at common law."

It is said that this notice, displayed at various points on the judge's frontiers, so terrorized the countryside that for years there was not so much as a beef tin or an old newspaper caught on the wrong side of the fence.—London News.

Washington Monument's Cap.

The first practical use ever made of aluminium was in fitting a cap on the peak of the Washington monument in 1884. Although aluminium was discovered in 1827 by Professor Wohler of Gottingen university, Germany, at that time it was practically an unknown metal, the cost and difficulty of its production having prevented its development until the general use of electricity made it easy and economical. The cap on the top of the monument is a square pyramid in shape, weighing 100 ounces, and is 8.9 inches in height and 5.6 inches in width at the base. General George W. Davis was in immediate charge of the completion of the monument under General Casey and has the distinction of being the first man to handle aluminium in a practical way. Until that time it had been used only for toys, for "freak" purposes, and small samples had been utilized in making models for the patent office.—Boston Globe.

Gold the First Metal Used.

Gold was probably the first metal known to man because it is generally found native. The oldest metallic objects to which we can assign a probable date were found in a royal tomb at Nagada, in Egypt, supposed to have been that of King Menes. In one of the chambers were some bits of gold and a bead, a button and a fine wire of nearly pure copper. If the tomb was properly identified, these objects were at least 6,300 years old at the time of their discovery. Nearly all of the ancient gold that has been examined contains enough silver to give it a light color. It was gathered by the ancients in the bed of the Pactolus and other streams of Asia Minor.

Old Time Advice to Doctors.

There is an old manuscript in the National library at Paris which has the following advice to physicians: "On approaching the patient you should assume a calm expression and avoid any gesture of greed or vanity, greet those who salute you with a humble voice and sit down when they do. Then, turning to the sick person, ask him how he is. To the patient you promise to cure, but immediately on leaving the room you say to the relatives that the disease is grave. The result will be that if you cure him your merit is greater, and you will receive the greater praise and fee, while if he dies they will say that you had no hope from the first."

Diamonds and Glass.

The diamond, instead of being a real solid, is a mass of atoms all in rapid and violent motion. The edge of the stone is formed of these moving molecules as well as the body. Now, glass is also made up of moving atoms, though they do not move so rapidly or so violently as the diamond atoms. When the diamond edge, therefore, is applied to the glass surface the diamond atoms drive the glass atoms out of the way and force a passage.

Training the American Officer.

"Demerits" are given to the West Point cadet for the most trifling of fenses, such as "gazing about in the ranks," having an "odor of cigarettes in his room" or appearing "on parade with soiled gloves." Sometimes I was completely prostrated and helpless. Doctors and medicines failed to help me and the pain continued until I got Doan's Kidney Pills. "THE BRIXTON BURGLARY."

Drew a Large and Appreciative Audience on Friday Evening.

The tenth Anniversary production by The Thespians of the Pennsylvania State College in "The Brixton Burglary" was well received in the Garman opera house on Friday evening. The young men deserve much credit for the way in which everyone of them performed their parts. The Brixton Burglary was as good if not better than any the students have played in Bellefonte. Notwithstanding that we are still in the Lenton Season and it was thought that a great many people would remain away on this account, but not so, the entire lower floor of the large play house was filled with the elite of Bellefonte. The large orchestra composed of Messrs A. S. LaCock, L. S. Meissner, R H. Alport, W. L. Moore, E. M. Frid, J. R. Robeson, H. A. Pearce, B. A. Smith, and Harry Wian, delighted the audience by rendering some very excellent music.

The curtin arose at 8:45 and for two hours the audience was kept in a good natured spirit, laughing most of the time at the awful mix up of "Septimus Pontifex" and "Fraser Green" had gotten into by going out with the "Bouncing Girls" and taking a ride on a bicycle and meeting with an accident which they knew if their wives found out certainly would cause trouble in the household. It happened that a burglary occurred at Brixton and some of the clothing of these two men had been found and naturally they were accused of the theft, and in order to keep their wives from finding out where they had been the night before they had to lie and oh what good provaricators they were, but in the end they had to acknowledge the truth and were forgiven.

Mrs. J. Hurley of Buffalo, who has been training this organization the past few weeks deserves much credit for the manner in which all of these young men took their difficult parts.

The quartet composed of Messrs. H. P Dawson. Hill, N. R. Wright and J. B. Wycoff certainly delighted the audience with several beautiful selection, they were well received and encored several times.

An Unintentional Joke.

An English writer tells the story of his first sixpence, which he earned by an unpremeditated joke. His father had been for twenty-seven years engaged in a suit in chancery and had just gained his cause. The expenses of the suit, however, had swallowed up the entire estate, the residue being merely 3s. 6d. The writer says:

My father ranged the seven sixpences on our breakfast table.

"My boy," said he, "see what comes of going to law in Great Britain! Your mother has told you that I have won my suit in chancery?"

"Yes, papa."

"Well, then, look! That is all I get of it," and he pointed grimly at the sixpences.

I opened wide my eyes. "All you get of the whole suit?" I echoed with a puzzled air, convinced that a suit in chancery was composed, as other suits are, of a coat, waistcoat and trousers. "Why, papa, those are only the buttons!"

It was this deplorable joke that earned me my sixpence, for my father, laughing, tossed me one across the table, and I rushed off with it like a dog pelted with a bone.

The Blacksmith's Sleeves.

An aged woman was standing before a beautiful picture of a blacksmith in a local department store. The picture was a remarkable painting and had evoked so much praise that hundreds of visitors thronged around it. The figure was that of a village blacksmith standing at his forge, which was blazing with a light that illuminated the whole room. The woman came to the canvas with several younger women, apparently her children. All stood with rapt attention before the work of art, contemplating the light effects and the beautiful shadows. One of the younger women asked of the elderly one what she thought of the picture.

"Well, it's all right but the sleeves," she replied. "I lived in the country a long time, and I know something that the painter with all his knowin' didn't know. That blacksmith's sleeves are rolled out. Now, they don't wear them that way. A blacksmith always turns his sleeves in so the flyin' sparks won't catch."—Indianapolis News.

A Friend In Need.

Immediately after the earthquake in California in 1906 relief stations were established in San Francisco and Oakland. Supplies poured in from neighboring ranches, other towns and other states, but almost all that was sent needed to be cooked before it could be eaten, and of course in many instances homeless wanderers were in immediate need of food. The volunteer cooks did the best they could. They boiled great kettles of soup, caldrons of coffee and oceans of tea, but it was impossible to cook rapidly enough to supply all comers. Late one afternoon when the cooked food supply was running low and a long line of hungry persons still waited to be fed a wagon halted before one of these stations, and a bluff old ranchman addressed the lady in charge.

"Say," said he, "I've brought you 300 dozen of the best eggs in the state, but you won't need to cook them. They're already cooked. I've been boiling eggs since 8 o'clock this morning."

Earthquake Pranks.

Hindustan has had many important geological changes effected by earthquakes. In 1762 Chittagong was violently shaken, the earth opening in many places and throwing up water and mud of sulphurous smell. Then sixty square miles of coast suddenly and permanently subsided, one of the Mug mountains entirely disappeared, and another sank so low that only the summit remained. At the same time a corresponding rise of ground took place at Ramree, an island farther along the coast. Again, at Cutch, in 1819 the fort and village of Sindree were submerged, and about five miles distant a long elevated mound was raised, measuring some fifty miles by sixteen in places, out of what had been a perfectly level plain.

Two Definitions.

In illustrating a point a lecturer told of some woman who spoke of her worse half as "a model husband." "Yes," commented an old Irishman who knew the husband better than she did, "he is all of that. But look at the dictionary and see what a 'model' means. It is defined as a 'miniature imitation of the real thing.'" The lecturer also told of the same Irishman's definition of the world repartee. Said he, "It is the saying right off of what you think of the next day."

The Contingent Fee.

The following pointed note was written by Daniel Webster in answer to a request that he take a certain case for a contingent fee. "I do not desire employment in professional matters, although I do sometimes engage in them. But I never engage on contingencies merely, for that would make me a mere party to a lawsuit."

Dan's Business Course.

By JAMES BRUCE.

Copyright, 1907, by Homer Sprague.

"But that was downright dishonest," said Dan.

"It was businesslike," corrected Phillips. "Mason should not have announced his plans. He bragged about them, and if Bray jumped in and got ahead of him it simply shows Bray's superior business ability."

"That is why you prefer Bray as a son-in-law?" queried Dan. "You want Mabel to marry a business manager, as it were."

"That is rather a blunt way of putting it," said Phillips uneasily. "It would be better to say that Bray's business qualifications are a point strongly in his favor."

"While my lack of them is to my discredit?"

"You do not have the knack of seizing your opportunities," said Phillips. "Now, take my case. I know that the Smelter and Exploration company purposes getting concessions in Borona. I am going to take a run down there and get the railroad franchise through Camar. Camar is on the coast, and the company will have to pay me well for what will cost me practically nothing. That is business. You might enlarge your fund of geographical information, but it would never occur to you to profit by what you learn."

"MY FRIEN'," PLEADED THE PRESIDENT, "LET US NOT ARGUE."

"There's hope yet," said Dan lightly as he rose. "Meanwhile I am to understand that your consent to my marriage with Mabel is refused?"

"Withheld," corrected Phillips. He never gave a definite answer when he could help it. "Perhaps in the future"— Dan nodded. Perhaps in the future his uncle might make him his heir.

John Phillips turned to his desk, with the consciousness of an unpleasant episode cleverly closed. It was not until the next morning that his eyes were opened. Mabel had run away. "I have gone with Dan," she wrote. "I want a husband, not a valuable addition to the firm of Phillips & Kent."

Phillips shrugged his shoulders and went his way. Deep in his heart her desertion hurt, but with several big operations pending he could not afford to waste time. He shut his ears to the talk of his associates, but as the days went on and Dan and Mabel did not appear to ask parental forgiveness his anxiety grew. He had supposed that when the honeymoon was over they would come back. He was almost tempted to delay his trip to Camar.

But there was no one else in the firm who spoke Spanish well enough to be trusted with the negotiations, and so the Mabel, his luxuriously appointed yacht, slipped down the bay and in due course of time anchored in the landlocked harbor of Porveda.

It took him two days to gain an audience with the president of the tiny republic, for there had just been a revolution, and matters were slow in straightening out. Alvadora, the new president, spoke English haltingly, but English he would speak, and Phillips, tactful, but impatient, chafed inwardly at the delay. He spoke Spanish fluently, and in ten minutes he could have approached the subject had the president held to his native tongue, but this was precisely what the president would not do.

"I spik the English. Is it not so?" he cried. "Bonato not one word could he spik—he who would be presidente! It is to chickle, is it not?"

"Another language makes another man," quoted Phillips from an advertising card he had seen in the street cars. "I compliment your excellency."

"My thanks," said Alvadora. "You are my friend. Is it not so?"

"But about this concession," pressed Phillips. "Of course a railroad would not pay very much, but we are looking into the future, when the road shall have made Camar great."

"Ah, yes, the railway," said Alvadora dreamily. "For him you shall see my business manager."

"Your prime minister?" suggested Phillips correctingly.

"Is it that I spik the English so bad?" demanded the president reproachfully. "Non. It is you who do not understand."

"But a business manager is not an official of state, but of commerce," persisted Phillips.

"My frien'," pleaded the president, "let us not argue. See my business manager in the morning. Look; I shall send him to you. Yes?"

"Thank you," said Phillips. "But meanwhile let me show you the advantage of such a proposition."

Alvadora waved him off. Business matters were for the business manager. He was the president. It was not well that he should interfere.

Phillips went away thoroughly disgusted, and his bad temper held the next morning as he waited at the hotel for the advent of this mysterious official, nor did his wrath cool when a card was brought to him and he read, "Daniel Carter Curtis, Business Manager, Republic of Camar."

"I have been instructed by the president that you wished to see me in the matter of some concession," said Dan as he entered resplendent in white flannel. "I presume that it has to do with the project that we discussed in your office not long ago."

"How the devil did you get here?" demanded Phillips blankly.

"Dicky Etern had his yacht at Palm Beach. He brought us over," explained Dan. "You seemed irritated that I had not jumped Mason's scheme, so I came down here to get in on this railroad matter."

"And brought Mabel with you?"

"Mrs. Curtis hopes that you will do us the honor of dining with us this evening."

"I'll be hanged if I do!" stormed Phillips. "This caps the climax. You steal my daughter and my ideas and then calmly invite me to dine with you as though nothing had happened."

"Then do not let us air our private quarrel," suggested Dan. "You want a concession. Alvadora is pleasantly impressed by your appreciation of his English and has instructed me to be as liberal as is consistent with safeguarding the interests of the republic."

"I could have got the concession for a song if you had not interfered," stormed Phillips, "but your underhand action"—

"Hold on!" said Dan. "You told me that was good business. To quote your own words, Mason had no business to announce his plans. Neither had you. I came down here and found that Bonato, the then executive, did not see my scheme, so I helped the revolutionists along and got the job from Alvadora. I get one-third on all foreign concessions. I think I'll make a good thing out of it."

"You overthrew the president?" gasped Phillips. "It was your work?"

"It was easy," said Dan modestly. "They had been talking of it before I came along. I just helped 'em to put it through. You see, Bonato was in the way."

"And you induced Mabel to elope with you?"

"She did not want to marry a man for his business qualifications alone," explained Dan. "That interview convinced her that you would not accede to my request, so we were married and started down here for our honeymoon. We rather thought you would be glad to see how well I had developed your suggestion."

"I guess I am," said Phillips weakly. "You can tell her that I shall be over tonight, and, Dan, I take back all I said about your capacity for business. You make out a concession on what you think is a fair basis, and I'll sign. I'm getting old, my boy, and I have had shock enough for one day."

Hint For Book Lenders.

A book borrower's album is the device which a woman who has a fine library has employed in order that she may keep track of her books and that her friends may not be delinquent in returning them. She delighted in lending her books, but was far from pleased in punching her friends up for their return. Now when a friend asks the loan of a book she acquiesces readily enough, but requests the borrower to write in the album his or her name and the date on which the book is borrowed. On returning it the borrower is asked to comment on the book and initial it. This album always is kept in a conspicuous place in the drawing room, where visitors are likely to pick it up and glance it through, learning who is not prompt in returning books. The result is that this woman now has her books returned promptly, as the borrowers know they will be convicted in the album if they are delinquent. They take kindly to the plan, the lender does not have to prod them for the return of the books, and she has an album which is valuable to her as containing the comments of her friends on the treasures in her library.—New York Press.

It isn't a crime exactly. Ye can't be sint to jail f'r it, but it's a kind iv a disgrace."—"Dissertations by Mr. Dooley."

His Hope For Revenge.

Judge (to barber sentenced to death)—If you have a last request, the court will be glad to grant it. Barber—I should like to shave the prosecuting attorney.—Munich Jugend.

Careful.

"Mr. Pumpus is very careful of his dignity," commented the observing girl.

"Yes," answered Miss Cayenne. "He naturally has so little that he has to be careful of it."—Washington Star.

Her Fatal Objection.

"This is so sudden!"

As he heard the girl speak these words the astonished young man rose to his feet in bewilderment.

"Sudden!" he repeated. "Did I hear aright? More than two years ago, I believe it was, since I first met you. For several months after that I only saw you occasionally; then gradually, very gradually, I increased my visits. It took six months to get on a formal calling basis; it took six months more to be a regular visitor; six months more to call you by your Christian name, and it is only during the last few months that I have ventured, with many misgivings, even to hold your hand. And now, after all this gradual development of my love, you tell me that my declaration is so sudden. Do you call this sudden?"

"I do, indeed," she replied calmly.

"But for what reason?"

The young lady replied, with some degree of hauteur:

"Simply this: I hardly imagined you would dare to speak to me like this for another two years at least, considering your present salary."—Pearson's.

The Wily Bell Boy.

A hotel man in New Hampshire was surprised to see one of his women guests come downstairs several nights running, fill her pitcher from the water cooler in the hall and return quietly to her room again. At first he thought the lady had some special reason for this queer performance. Then he thought he had better speak to her. Accordingly on the fourth or fifth night he approached her politely, took the pitcher from her hands and filled it himself.

"If you would ring, madam," he said, "this would always be done for you. There is no occasion for you ever to come down yourself for water. A ring"—

"But I have no bell," said the lady.

"Oh, madam, of course you have a bell, I'll show it to you."

And he carried the pitcher up to her room for her and pointed to the bell beside her bed.

"That is the bell," he said.

The lady started in surprise.

"That the bell?" she exclaimed. "Why, the bell boy told me that was the fire alarm and I wasn't to touch it on any account except in case of fire."—Washington Star.

The First Fly Fishers.

Doubtless the reason why artificial flies were originally invented was because it was impossible to use the smaller and more delicate natural flies as baits on the hook. The first fly fisher cast his eyes about him in search of something that would answer in imitating the flies upon which the trout were feeding. Feathers were naturally the first materials thought of, and the old red cock's hackle was the first of all the artificial insects, the old, old Adam of them all. The breed has been increasing for several hundred years and numbers 2,000 or more at the present day. Of salmon flies alone there are several hundred patterns. These belong to the lure order mostly, as do many of the large flies used for bass and trout. The little old red hackle remains a good fly to this day and is put upon bodies of many colors, peacock harl being perhaps as well liked as anything; red wool is favored by many.—Forest and Stream.

Indians and War Paint.

The Indians have a tradition that tells how the custom of painting their faces originated. A certain big chief while hunting deer was chased by a lion and fell exhausted, calling upon the Big Bear, which Indians believe was the grandfather of man, to save him. The Big Bear heard and went to the man's assistance, scratching his foot and sprinkling the blood over him. No animal will eat bear or taste his blood, and when the lion smelled it he turned away. But in doing so he scratched some of the blood off the Indian's face with his claw by accident. When he found himself unhurt, the Indian was so thankful that he let the blood dry on his face. With the marks of the lion's claws this gave the effect of stripes, and ever afterward when going on hunting expeditions for man or beast the Indian painted his face in stripes as a charm against danger.

The Left Hand.

It is strange that so strong a prejudice against the left hand has lived and increased for centuries when there is no natural or physiological reason for it. Examination of the skeleton of a person who was strong, healthy and well formed in life shows that the bones of the left hand and arm are just as large and capable as those of the right. The study of physiology shows, too, that the muscles and ligaments and cartilages that fastened that person's arms to his body and gave them the power of motion were made to do their work just as well on one side of the body as on the other. If the left side was the weaker, it was because of the failure to exercise it as freely as the other.—Scrap Book.

Two Reasons Why.

A government officer recently returned to Washington after an absence of some years abroad. He met an old friend who had been interested in flying machines and asked:

"Well, professor, how are you getting along with your aerial machine?"

"It is not yet a complete success," the professor said, with a sad smile. "I have two things to accomplish before I can say that it is."

"What are they?"

"I must discover how to get my machine in the air and then how to keep it there."—Success.

Choirs are Preparing for Easter

The choirs in the churches of Bellefonte almost without a single exception, are hard at work preparing music for the Easter services a week from next Sunday.

It will not matter much which church the stranger in town may visit that day, there will be good music awaiting him. The various pastors are also working hard and from appearances mean to spread themselves from the pulpit.

In some of the churches regular programs are being prepared, which will be followed out to the letter. These will be published later. The churches will also be decorated for the occasion with potted plants and cut flowers, which will give a pleasing surrounding for good music and good preaching.

Miss Brisbin and her large choir at the Presbyterian Church are preparing a beautiful cantata for this great religious day.

Deafness Cannot be Cured.

By local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars free.

Catching "Suckers," the way to Serve Them.

Quite a number of fish are being caught while the waters of the river and creek are at the present flooded state. The principal variety being captured are what are known as "suckers," which at this time of the year are fine flavored and the meat is solid. Although the species are filled with many bones if they are served properly they make a good bite for any epicurean.

A well known local fisherman states that most people do not know how to serve a "bony" fish. He says that after being made ready for the pan the large backbone should be removed and then a liberal quantity of salt placed inside the fish. It should then be placed in a crock and baked slowly. As the fish is baking the salt dissolves the small bones, and there you are are—nothing but the real meat.

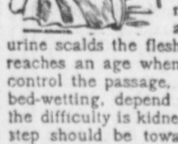
Women as Well as Men Are Made Miserable by Kidney Trouble.

Kidney trouble preys upon the mind, discourages and lessens ambition; beauty, vigor and cheerfulness soon disappear when the kidneys are out of order or diseased.



Kidney trouble has become so prevalent that it is not uncommon for a child to be born afflicted with weak kidneys. If the child urinates too often, if the urine scalds the flesh or if, when the child reaches an age when it should be able to control the passage, it is yet afflicted with bed-wetting, depend upon it, the cause of the difficulty is kidney trouble, and the first step should be towards the treatment of these important organs. This unpleasant trouble is due to a diseased condition of the kidneys and bladder and not to a habit as most people suppose.

Women as well as men are made miserable with kidney and bladder trouble, and both need the same great remedy. The mild and the immediate effect of Swamp-Root is soon realized. It is sold by druggists, in fifty-cent and one dollar sizes. You may have a sample bottle by mail free, also pamphlet telling all about it, including many of the thousands of testimonial letters received from sufferers cured. In writing Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., be sure and mention this paper.

Home of Swamp-Root.

Don't make any mistake, but remember the name Swamp-Root, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, and the address, Binghampon, N. Y. on every bottle.

GROOMING COUNTS

But it cannot make a Fair Skin or a Glossy Coat.

Women with good complexions cannot be homely. Creams, lotions, washes and powders cannot make a fair skin. Every horseman knows that the satin coat of his thoroughbred comes from the animal's "all-right" condition.

Let the horse get "off his feed" and his coat turns dull. Currying, brushing and rubbing will give him a clean coat, but cannot produce the coveted smoothness and gloss of the horse's skin, which is his complexion. The ladies will see the point.

Lane's Family Medicine

Is the best preparation for ladies who desire a gentle laxative medicine that will give the body perfect cleanliness internally and the wholesomeness that produces such skins as painters love to copy.

On Good Friday the three Hour Passion Service will be held in St. John's Episcopal church from 12 to 3 and in the evening at 8 o'clock there will be an Exhibition of 52 Passion Pictures of the Last Days of our Lord.

While a grand invitation is extended to all interested to attend these services a special invitation is hereby given to the Young Men's Club and their lady friends and to the Young Woman's Club and their gentlemen friends to be present at the showing of the Passion Pictures.

On Easter day the services will be.

Holy Communion at 8 a. m.

Morning Prayer, Sermon and Communion at 11 a. m.

Children's Herald Festival at 7:30 p. m. When the Sunday School children will present their Lenton offerings and receive each a potted plant in bloom.

Persistent.

A middle aged man stopped at the subpostoffice in the north end and asked if there was anything for the Murphys.

"No, there is not," said the man at the window.

"Anything for Jane Murphy?"

"No."

"Anything for Anne Murphy?"

"No."

"Anything for Bob Murphy?"

"No."

"Anything for Terry?"

"No, nor for Pat nor for Dennis nor Pete nor Matt nor Edward Murphy. There is nothing for any Murphy, dead, living or unborn, native or foreign, civilized or savage, male or female, black or white, franchised or disfranchised. No, there is positively nothing for any of the Murphys, either individually, collectively, severally, now and forever, one and inseparable."

The little man on the outside of the window looked amazed and then in a persuasive voice said, "Please look and see if there is anything for P. J. Murphy."—Columbus Dispatch.

Almost a Miracle.

A good hearted curate who firmly believed that God was continually working miracles to enable him to help the needy and who seldom had a coin in his pocket, though he was never devoid of the fire of charity in his heart, was accosted one day by a beggar woman. He pleaded utter lack of money and sadly turned aside, but on the mendicant beseeching him to search his pockets he hopelessly put his hand in one and, to his amazement and joy, found a five shilling piece there.

"Another of God's miracles," he exclaimed, and then, addressing the woman: "This coin belongs to you of right. Take it and go in peace." Having told the story a few hours later to his worldly minded vicar and suggested that they should both go down on their knees and render thanks to God, a strange unpleasant light suddenly broke on the mind of the shrewd pastor, who exclaimed in accents not suggestive of thanksgiving, "Good Lord, are those my breeches that you've on you?"—Contemporary Review.

"Ducks and Drakes."

The origin of the common saying "Making ducks and drakes with one's money" is attributed to a game described in the words of an old writer as "a kind of sport or play with an oister shell or stone thrown into water and making circles yer it sinke." If the stone emerges once, it is a duck; if it emerges more than once, the game proceeds according to the following rhyme:

1, 2, A duck and a drake;
3, And a halfpenny cake;
4, And a penny to pay the old baker;
5, A hop an a scotch
Is another notch;
6, Slitherum, slatherum! Take her!

The game is evidently the same as that played even today by every boy who has access to a pond or a quiet river when he tries to make a smooth stone skip along the surface of the water. Its connection with the popular phrase is, of course, only a metaphorical one to indicate heedlessness in the use of money.

"To the Bitter End."

One of the most interesting phases of the study of language is the peculiar manner in which words and phrases originating in mistakes finally grow into the common speech of the people. An instance of this is the expression "to the bitter end," which is commonly used to denote the final extremity of a crisis. Although perfectly proper today, it is in reality a mistake. The correct phrase is "to the better end" and arose from the fact that when a vessel has paid out all her cable in a storm it has run out to the end which has been little used and therefore to the better end. Daniel Defoe uses the proper phrase in "Robinson Crusoe" in his description of the storm at Yarmouth when he says, "We rode with two anchors ahead and the cables veered out to the better end."

Romance of the Cigar.

A bride of a year ago gave her husband a box of long, lean and sickly looking cigars for a birthday present. The man smelled them, looked at the label and then, with tears in his eyes, said: "I cannot bear to smoke your present. I will keep them always as a token of your love." His wife was so touched that she went down town and ordered three boxes of the same brand and had them charged to her husband. When she gave them to him she said: "Here, dear; these are not a present. Smoke them and enjoy them."—Topeka State Journal.

Homeric Symbol.

You know the fine picture in Homer of the dead leaves which fall to make place for the young buds. It is as true of men as of trees; we have our time and pass away. Behind our vanished youth germinates the youth of others. Our children's destiny ought not to be dulled by what there has been in ours. —Revue des Deux Mondes.

A Lever.

"Is that baby strong?"

"Well, I should say so! He raised the whole family out of bed at 3 o'clock this morning, and scientists say that that's the hour when everybody's strength is at its lowest point."—London Answers.

Giving It Away.

The Young Man—Dicky, you think a good deal of your sister, don't you? Dicky (entertaining him)—You bet! So does ma and pa. She's been in the family mighty near forty years.—Chicago Tribune.

An obstinate fruit stain can generally be removed by holding the spot over the fumes of sulphur.

Simply Couldn't Suppose It.

Scottish folk are proverbially canny and prudent in money matters, and the following shows that the younger generation is no exception to the rule.

A teacher in a lowland school was taking mental arithmetic with a class of boys. She asked one urchin:

"How much would your mother give you to buy four pounds of tea at one and six a pound?"

"We na'er get sae much at once as that, mum."

"Never mind that. Four pounds at one and six?"

"But we canna afford the one and six, mum. We always hae the one and twa."

"Answer the question. What would she give you to pay for four pounds of tea at"—

"Nawthin', mum."

"What do you mean by 'nothing?'"

"She'd na' gie' me only bawbees. She'd tell me tae ask the mon tae pit it doon."

"Oh, dear! Oh, dear! But, supposing she did?"

With a pitying smile came the reply. "A can see y're ne'er met ma mither, mum."—Philadelphia Public Ledger.

What Lava Is Good For.

Tourists in Italy are astonished at the practical use made of the lava that has flowed from Vesuvius in past and recent eruptions, for all Naples and its vicinity appear to be a world of lava. The streets are paved with it. There are staircases and statues, drinking troughs, bric-a-brac and even jewelry of this strange material which once bubbled from the yellow and dripping lips of the great crater above. The careless guides make money out of it by pressing coins or other objects on partially cooled fragments and selling these to visitors. On the ashy flanks of the mountain there is enough lava to build another New York or Chicago—a shoreless frozen sea, it seems, of dull black that shimmers strangely purple in some lights. These heaving billows and snakelike masses were once white hot, steaming and even exploding as the fiery flood met some little innocent stream on the way down.

Mistakes In War.

In the Bull Run defeat McDowell laid the blame on Patterson. In the battles around Richmond Lee's plans failed on account of Huger's lethargy. At Pittsburg Landing Grant would have been successful but for Wallace. At Gettysburg Lee's hands were tied by the dilatoriness of Stuart. And so on from the foundation of the world to the present time. It has been said by writers on the art of war that every battle is a series of mistakes. These mistakes are made on both sides and are the cause of victory as well as defeat. It is almost amusing to think of the numberless good and sufficient reasons that Shafter could have given if he had been defeated in Cuba. If Japan had been worsted in the Russo-Japanese war, one result would have been that Oyama would have written the book of lamentations and excuses instead of Kuropatkin.—Chicago Chronicle.

An Old Time Playful Prisoner.

Over a century ago there occurred in London what the Annual Register called "a most unparalleled atrocity." It was only the theft of a pocket handkerchief from a pocket, but the circumstances of the deed explain the vehemence of this denunciation. Four men were on their trial for assaulting a man in his house at Ponder's End, putting him in fear and stealing from him, and one of them relieved the tedium of the trial, which lasted eight hours, by picking the pocket of one of the turnkeys as he stood in the dock. An official had the presence of mind to order the restoration of the handkerchief, and the prisoner had enough presence of mind to obey "with the most careless indifference," but the court, we read, "were horror struck." Justice, however, pulled itself together sufficiently to sentence all four men to death.

Swords and Scimiters.

The scimiter of the Saracens was the most effective sword for cutting purposes ever devised. It will be remembered how, according to the story of Sir Walter Scott's "Talisman," with such a weapon the pagan Saladin chopped a soft cushion in two at one blow, to the amazement of Richard Coeur de Lion. With a straight sword one can make a hack or thrust, but to slice an adversary one must saw with it. The scimiter, being curved and wide and heavy toward the end, slices by the mere fact of striking.

Pe-ru-na, the Standard Remedy.

HOT WEATHER CATARRH.

Affects the Stomach, Kidneys, Bowels, Pelvic Organs.

COLD WEATHER CATARRH.

Affects the Head, Throat, Lungs, Bronchial Tubes.

Catarrh is recognized all over the civilized world as a formidable disease. In the United States alone, two hundred thousand people have catarrh annually. In other countries the ratio of victims is as great.

For many years Pe-ru-na has held the foremost place as a standard remedy for catarrh.

Pe-ru-na is well-known in both the western and eastern hemispheres.

THE GREAT CONTEST ENDED.

Harry Rearick Wins Out With 961 Votes Ahead.

Perhaps one of the hardest fought contests ever waged in Bellefonte has been on for the past three months as to the most popular lodge man in the town. A score of people entered in the fight but Messrs. Dunlap and Rearick made such wonderful strides over the rest that the most of them dropped.

Mr. Harry Irvin, Bellefonte's popular and progressive cigar merchant presented a solid gold watch (Elgin or Waltham) and fob to the most popular member of a secret order or society in town, the same to win the most votes in a contest which closed Saturday night at 10 o'clock.

The two leading contestants were like great generals in an army with scores of under officers to do the work while they did the commanding. General Rearick had Brigadier General Reese, Colonel's Freeman, Taylor and others, scouted out in his interest and secured votes.

While General Dunlap had Colonel's Kirk, Kane, Moerschbacher and another big bunch to look after his interest. Towards the last their friends put in votes by the hundreds, and from 9 o'clock Saturday until 1 a. m. Sunday the judges were busy counting. When all was summed up Rearick was in the lead by 961 votes. When the result was announced to the large crowd gathered at the cigar store, Mr. Dunlap was the first to step up and offer his congratulations to the gentleman that won the watch. We wish to extend our congratulations to Mr. Irvin and the two gentleman for the successful manner in which the contest was carried on.

Mr. Rearick received 7951.

Mr. Dunlap received 6935.

The judges were Messrs. Ben Gorden, Wm. Taylor, Lose Kane, Clarence Rine, Ambrose Sloteman, Fred Reese and George Waite.

After the result was announced Mr. Rearick and his staff banqueted at the Blackford restaurant.

Wedding Bells.

The hospitable home of Mr. and Mrs. Geo. D. Johnston, of Howard township, Center county, was the scene of a very pretty wedding on Wednesday evening, March 20th, at half past five o'clock. The high contracting parties were none other than Miss Bessie C., the charming daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Johnston, and Mr. John C. Brooks formerly of Curtin. The ceremony was performed in the presence of the immediate relatives and friends of the happy young couple by the Rev. E. M. Aller, pastor of the Methodist Episcopal church of which both are consistent members. Immediately after the ceremony the entire company were conducted into the dining room where a large table, literally groaning beneath its weight of good things, awaited them. It is needless to say that every one present did justice to the occasion and the table was soon relieved of its burden.

The presents were numerous and useful, consisting of linen, china, and silverware, and many other useful articles.

Mr. and Mrs. Brooks are among the most highly esteemed young people of the community and, owing to their fine social qualities, have a wide circle of admiring friends. Mr. Brooks is a skilled telegraph operator in the employ of the N. Y. C. R. R., company and is located at Waterville, Pa., where he has a house already furnished awaiting the superintendence of his accomplished bride.

They were accompanied to the P. R. R. station at Mount Eagle by a number of friends where, in the midst of the usual shower of rice, they boarded the 8:40 p. m. train east for their new home whither the good wishes of their many friends will follow them. The bride is a sister of Mrs. Crissie Tanner and J. K. Johnston, Esq., of Bellefonte.

"Beauty Doctor" Well Received.

The "Beauty Doctor" appeared in the Garman Opera house on Monday evening and pleased a large audience. The performance from beginning to end kept the people laughing continually. Will Philbrick as Ebenezer Lester, and Harry Bewley as Solomon Cohon certainly made a great hit in Bellefonte.

Communication.

Captains Irwin and Hunter came to Bellefonte 4 months ago to look after the Salvation Army after having been here some time they were approached by different business men who claimed certain members of the corps owed them bills of long standing and they were asked to use their influence in getting them to settle. The Capt. says debt is one of the special points the Army fights and always urges it members not to enter into debts of any kind. These comrades were seen and urged to make some effort to get these things straight, the Capt. says they failed to make the effort and in consequence have been dropped from the roll, and are no longer members. Others have been dropped because of going to churches, and others because of falling away from the professions of the S. A. Capt. Irwin says she would not have made any public statement for the Army if those who come under these headings had not told falsehoods as to why they had been dropped. We are prepared to tell any interested why the following were dropped from the roll of the Bellefonte Corps.

Elmer Mulbarger, Grace Mulbarger, Jennie Grub, Sanford Wilson, James Hale, Wm. Bathurst, Mrs. Bathurst, Nannie Mulbarger, Wm. Steel, Sarah Holderman, Joshua Folk, Mrs. Wine, Annie Keeler, Miss Dora Askey, Miss Kathryn Crust, Clara Stonbaugh, James Stoner, Mrs. Stoner, John Emel, Mrs. Fanning, Mary Justus, Wm. Bowers, Theo Snyder, Rebbecca Leach, Sam'l Gordon.

Capt. Irwin also states that John Bryan was not put out of the Salvation Army as has been reported that if he is out it is his wish.

Signed,
Capt. IRWIN,

Meeting at the Jail.

A gospel meeting was held in the jail Thursday afternoon, several hymns were sung, one of the prisoners assisting nobly in singing, "What a friend we have in Jesus." The prisoners were then addressed by Rev. Johan Marcusson of Denmark a minister in the Friend's society. Mrs. W. H. Spangler then spoke and Miss Clara Valentine offered prayer. The prisoners serven in number paid the closest attention to all the exercises. Mr. From being especially moved by the songs and speaking.

The Curfew.

There appeared in the columns of one of the local newspaper an article on the proposed curfew ordinances. While it was not the intentions of the writer to "criticise the good intention of the ministerial brethren or lady friends," he proceeded to speak his little piece. To conceive a curfew law as a necessity for Bellefonte or any town is not an acknowledgement of retrogression rather than progress. The fact that we have made gigantic strides toward a greater civilization is no proof that we have left all our sins behind us—we have managed in some way to carry a considerable number right up into this civilization which is more than we care for some of the beautiful and staunch virtues which were ours before we became so civilized.

"In our minds a curfew law is a thing of the antiquated past." I believe we do not claim "to be the people and that wisdom will die with us" nor that wisdom orignated with us—some thing of the antiquated past would be a credit to us in our administrations of the law. Mr. Writer, did you ever hear the "survival of the fittest"? It should not be necessary for any father or mother to have the support of any law or ordinace in the control of their children. Agreed, many things should not be that are. Time was when parental authority went a great way and counted for much, today it is a very lax affair in many homes. In our "greater civilization" children to an alarming extent exercise the authority. Where parents fail it is time for an ordinance or law to take a hand. Some parents try to instil principles of honestly into the minds of their offspring but in spite of all this, a child may help himself to something to which he has no right, what then? Law.

"It is interfering with the free rights and liberties of an American citizen."

American liberty! many are the crimes committed in thy name. American liberty, what a beautiful thing it is! The poor thing has been made the scape-goat for so many sins that it is almost worn to the bone by the weight of the pack. Of course it is not right to place any restrictions upon our American liberty. Hands off. A few weeks ago the writer saw a man who seemed to have an overwhelming affinity for the ground he actually could not stand up. The poor fellow was merely exercising the privileges of his American liberties and they were American if any ever were, for inside of him he had a fair supply of American whiskey, backed up by the American saloon supported by the American Government.

American liberties forsooth. And yet there hurried to the scene a Bellefonte policeman who placed a restriction upon the free rights and American liberties of this man by putting him in the lock-up. Let us have the curfew ordinance to help our boys and girls and shield them from the evil influences that are abroad at night. In fact there are such things as ordinances prohibiting street walking which might reach those over sixteen. American Liberty Forever.

Life Guards.

The Life Guards are two regiments o cavalry forming part of the British household troops. They are gallant soldiers, and every loyal British heart is proud of them. Not only the King's household, but yours, ours, everybody's should have ts life guards. The need of them is especially great when the greatest foes of life, diseases, find allies in the very elements, as colds, influenza, catarrh, the grip, and pneumonia do in the stormy month of March. The best way that we know of to guard against these diseases is to strengthen the system with Hood's Sarsaparilla—the greatest of all life guards It removes the conditions in which these diseases make their most successful attack, gives vigor and tone to all the vital organs and functions, and imparts a genial warmth to the blood. Remember the weaker the system the greater the exposure to disease. Hood's Sarsaparilla makes the system strong.

Murderous Fury of a Mob.

Ray Stannard Baker's wonderful description of the Atlanta riot in the April American Magazine reads like the story of a Russian massacre. When the fury of the mob reached the highest pitch, the ruling passion to kill conquered reason, and men gave themselves up wildly to murder. The "right" negroes were not punished at all, but innocent men in their stead. Mr. Baker reports:

"A lame boot-black, an inoffensive, industrious negro boy, at that moment actually at work shining a man's shoes, was dragged out and cuffed, kicked and beaten to death in the street. Another young negro was chased and stabbed to death with jack-knives in the most unspeakably horrible manner. The mob entered barber shops where respectable negro men were at work shaving white customers, pulled them away from their chairs and killed them. Cars were stopped and inoffensive negroes were thrown through the windows or dragged out and beaten. They did not stop with killing and maiming; they broke into hardware stores and armed themselves, they demolished not only negro barber shops and restaurants, but they robbed stores kept by white men!"

Cupid and Croesus.

By Constance D'Arcy Mackay.

Copyright, 1907, by Mary McKeon.

"But the trouble with being rich is that you never know whether any one is in love with you or not" mourned Rosamond Maythorn, stretching out a daintily slippered foot to the fender, where a bright fire gleamed.

Her father's eyes twinkled. "I think I have heard that phrase before, my dear," he said kindly, "and, while I acknowledge that your fortune is a good deal of a lure, I must confess that if I were a young man just the sight of your eyes and the sound of your voice would be enough for me."

Rosamond shook her head. "You see, father, you were an exceptional young man," she said, but the look in her eyes was troubled, and a faint pucker showed between her brows. Her father leaned forward and patted the slim young hand that lay on the carved arm of the chair. His motherless daughter was very dear to him.

"What's gone wrong, Rosamond?" he queried. "Is the new Worth gown a failure, or didn't you enjoy your dance last night, or is the world generally stuffed with sawdust?"

"It isn't the world that's stuffed with sawdust; it's the men!" cried Rosamond.

Her father laughed outright, and Rosamond frowned at him with delicious severity.

"Ah, you may laugh," she said, "but I'm in earnest just the same. I'm sick of all men I see at balls and operas. I don't want a puppet in evening dress to talk to. I want a man—a man who works and thinks and feels—and in this silly social whirl I've not been able to find one. Besides, there's not one of them that's not a fortune hunter, from Toby Lapman to George Astorgilt. The fact is, I'm beginning to tire of utterly vapid days and a pleasure seeking existence."

"What do you intend to do, then?"

"I propose to work for my living."

"Seriously, Rosamond?"

"Doesn't this look serious?" She drew from the floor beside her a writing pad covered with cabalistic signs.

"Shorthand, as I live!" ejaculated her father. "Well, Rosamond, I've always let you have your own way, and if you want to make an experiment go on. I won't hinder you. I suppose in a month or two you'll be applying for a situation in my office."

"Nothing of the kind!" she flashed. "I'll find a situation of my own. I'll cease to be Rosamond Maythorn. Tomorrow morning I'll be Rosamond Marsh, and if you expect to catch a glimpse of me you'll have to be up early, for I'm off to my business college at 8 o'clock."

There followed days when Rosamond was utterly fatigued and disheartened. Many a time she hovered on the verge of giving up her course and going back to her butterfly existence, but the same vital energy that made her father a power in Wall street was latent in her, too, and she stuck it out courageously, though often the penciled letters swam before her eyes, her back ached, and her fingers almost refused to "clack" at the type of her machine. To a girl accustomed to waking at 10 in the morning it was no small wrench to put back the hands of the clock to 7 a. m. as a rising hour and instead of luncheon in a well appointed dining room to scurry to a restaurant for a hurried midday meal.

"My, isn't it fine to think that our course is nearly finished!" sighed Matty Brown, a trim girl in black, busily engaged in putting on her hat before a small mirror which hung in the cloakroom. "I suppose we'll be hunting for work next. Wonder if we'll soon get any?"

"I hope so," said Rosamond soberly. The hundreds and hundreds of toilers whom she passed in the streets each night after the 5 o'clock whistles blew had given her a very different view of life from that which she had cherished in her brocaded boudoir. She knew now that it was composed of infinite struggle and hardship, and it was with a thrill of thankfulness that she found herself singled out from a dozen applicants to be the stenographer of Graham Ellis, a young lawyer of whom great things were prophesied.

From the first Rosamond liked him. He was kind and courteous—never too hurried to be polite, never more exacting than the occasion required. His sincerity and straightforwardness spoke not only in his frank and genial manner, but in every direct glance of his steady gray eyes, every motion of his well poised head.

"Tired?" said Rufus Maythorn a few months later, looking at his daughter across the dinner table that sparkled with silver and cut glass.

"Not a bit," she answered cheerfully.

"And you still like your employer?"

"He seems," said Rosamond demurely, "to be a very just and reasonable sort of person."

"The people who know him say fine things of him," returned her father. "I should judge that he was composed of brain and muscle rather than of sawdust."

One evening after office hours, as Rosamond was walking homeward, Graham Ellis joined her. She had played so long on the dangerous edge of discovery that she had become accustomed to it, but on this particular night his sudden presence startled her, and to gain time she turned into a shabby side street. A girl was just disappearing into one of the dingy doorways. It was Matty Brown. Instantly Rosamond saw a way of escape.

"Good night," she said, pausing and abruptly holding out her hand to Graham Ellis.

"You live here?" he interrogated.

A little demon of mischief looked out of Rosamond's brown eyes.

"Why not?" she queried lightly, already halfway up the steps.

"May I come and see you some time when you're not too tired or busy?" he asked.

"I should be delighted," smiled Rosamond and then slipped into the dimly lighted hall, where the figure of Matty Brown was slowly receding. Here she waited till she knew that Graham Ellis had passed and then went out again, her heart beating more than it had ever done over a social triumph. Poor and dismal and dingy though the place was, he had cared enough to come and see her in it, while the men she was accustomed to meet in the drawing rooms of her friends would have sneered and passed on.

"I must have made a mistake in the number, Miss Marsh," he said to her the following week. "Was it 15 or 17? I rang at several doors, but no one seemed to know your name."

"We've moved," said Rosamond calmly. "We don't live there any more."

"Oh, I see," said Graham Ellis. There was a long pause. "Of course," he began rather stiffly—"of course if you don't care to have me call"—

Rosamond bent over her machine. "I don't know when you've seen where I live if you'll like it," she murmured, and Ellis was too much in earnest to note the catch of amusement in he tone.

"Like it!" he cried. "Of course I'll like it! Do you think it makes any difference to me where you live? Surely we can't have worked together all these months without your knowing that I love you!"

"Ah," said Rosamond, with a ripple of whimsical laughter, "then if nothing makes any difference, you won't mind my being Rufus Maythorn's daughter instead of Rosamond Marsh, for, you know, there was once an ancient who set out with a lantern to look for an honest man; but, since I'm a modern, I've used a typewriter instead. And it led me straight to you."

"To a man with nothing on earth to offer you but love!"

"Well, isn't that the greatest thing in the world?" she whispered, flushing adorably.

"YOU LIVE HERE?" HE INTERROGATED.

Her References.

Not long ago a Philadelphia lady was suddenly deserted by the cook and advertised for another, stipulating that applicants must furnish good references. A middle aged colored woman was among those who sought the place, and when asked for her references she said, "'Deed, Ah done tore up dem references, lady." "Don't you know," the lady asked, "that if you don't bring any references with you people will suspect that you are not a good servant? I am surprised that you should destroy the references a former employer was kind enough to give you." "Yassum; maybe dat's so," the applicant replied. "Folks can 'spect Ah ain't er good servant, but yo'd know Ah was crazy ef Ah'd brung dem references." — Philadelphia Record.

Very Useful.

"He's a very good horse, but thin," remarked the dealer who was trying to sell the animal. "I sometimes have to tie a knot in his tail to prevent him from slipping through his collar. But that's no matter. Occasionally, too, I have to hang a sack over him to keep the hay inside of him from getting sunburned. He's a good horse, but thin. My wife and her mother took him for a drive the other day, and they foolishly let him trot. When he trotted the rattling of his bones so startled him that he bolted, pitched my wife and mother-in-law out and killed the old woman. Oh, he's a good horse if thin, but he's very useful."—Liverpool Mercury.

Fifth Monarchy Men.

The fifth monarchy men formed a religious sect that sprang up in the days of Charles I. of England. They were so called from the fact that they asserted that in the last days the four ancient monarchies, the Assyrian, the Persian, the Babylonian and the Roman, would be restored, and to them would be added a Christian monarchy, or fifth monarchy, of which Christ would be the king.

Snakes With Two Heads.

I have lately been assured by more than one of my friends that they have seen in northern India snakes with two heads—i. e., without a tail, but with a second and perfectly formed head in the place where the tail ought to be. They assure me that there are specimens in northern India museums and that these freaks of nature are frequently found by the natives. The rider is added that the natives declare that each head lives and performs active service for six months in the year in turn. The snakes are said to grow to about three feet in length. I myself have killed a small snake with two heads, but these were both at the same end of the reptile, a very different matter, which is, I believe, a well known freak and in the same category with two headed calves.—Pioneer.

Man and His Dress.

The well dressed man wears clothes that no one ever notices; at business, except in the very warmest weather, usually dark. No one ever notices clean linen, while linen soiled ever so slightly is very conspicuous. No one ever notices a hat unless it is of ultra shape, dirty or shabby. No one ever notices shoes unless they are loud or need blacking or are run down at the heels or shabby. No one ever notices clean finger nails, while those needing attention are always conspicuous. The man should not be lost sight of by the conspicuousness of his clothes, either from being overdressed or shabbily dressed.—Batten's Wedge.

The One and the Naught.

Oliver Wendell Holmes once sent two poetical letters to the "postoffice" of an Episcopal fair at Pittsfield, Mass. In one of them the first stanza was:

Fair lady, whosoever thou art,
Turn this poor leaf with tenderest care
And hush, oh, hush, thy beating heart.
The one thou lovest will be there.

On turning the "poor leaf" there was found a dollar bill, with some verses beginning:

Fair lady, lift thine eyes and tell
If this is not a truthful letter.
This is the one (1) thou loveth well,
And naught (0) can make thee love it better (10).

Occultism.

It is noteworthy that supernaturalism prevailed just as strongly at the other side of the globe among the aborigines of the new world. The coming of the Spaniards had been prophesied to the Mexicans by their caciques, and the prophecies were sung amid loud lamentations at their festivals.—London Onlooker.

The Hot Wind From the Desert.

"Khamsin" is the hot wind from the desert which blows out of the Sahara upon Egypt. The word means fifty, from the idea that it lasts for fifty days. The "khamsin" is terribly hot and dry, and sometimes brings pestilence with it.

Her "No."

Tom—Bess said "No" to me last night, but I don't think she really could tell why she did it. Nell—Oh, yes, she could. She told me. Tom—Did she? Nell—Yes; she said she didn't think you'd take "No" for an answer.—Philadelphia Press.

About the Only Place.

A company of settlers in naming their new town called it Dictionary, because, as they said, "that's the only place where peace, prosperity and happiness are always found."

The notion of God which makes him a manufacturer of footstools, our enemies below the raw material, is still [illegible].—Puck.

Better Cigar Values at Lower Prices Than Ever Sold Before

A Direct-dealing Plan That Cuts Out Four Profits and Much Expense

NATIONAL CIGAR STANDS

National Cigar Stands give the smoker just what every man would get if he could—wholesale rates on retail purchases.

Everybody knows how much he saves when he is able to buy a suit of clothes or a pair of shoes, or a gun or anything else at the wholesaler's price. He saves the retailer's profit; usually 20 to 30 per cent.

When a man buys cigars at a National Stand he saves, not merely one profit, but three or four. Instead of saving 20 to 30 per cent. he saves nearer 50 per cent.

This is because all the 2,000 drug stores which conduct National Cigar Stands concentrate their cigar-buying in a single co-operative concern, which is thus given

The Greatest Retail Cigar Outlet on Earth

With 2,000 established retail stores to provide cigars for, this concern becomes a power in the tobacco market big enough to own its own brands, control its own factories and be its own producer! Each of the 2,000 stores is thereby virtually a partner in a tremendous cigar-producing business. Each gets its goods direct and at low cost—paying no jobbing profits, no fancy dividends, no expenses of traveling salesmen. It can and does retail at the usual wholesale price—or even less.

That is why a cigar like

NATIONAL CUBA-ROMA NATIONAL

Can be sold at Five Cents each

In leaf-quality, workmanship, fragrance and general smoking satisfaction it is a better cigar than was ever sold at 3 for 25c. All clear Havana, and good, ripe, selected leaf at that.

"Cuba Roma" is one of 30 brands owned and sold exclusively by National Stands. All classes of cigars are included, all tastes and purses suited.

Every cigar in the line is nearly twice better than you have ever got before for the price.

Trying is believing.

ALUMNI BANQUET AT TYRONE

Dickenson College Men Gather Around Fesal Board.

J. STINE TOAST MASTER

At 5:30 Thursday Evening Sixty-two Alumni and Guests of Dickinson College of Carlisle Had Their Banquet.

IN THE I. O. O. F. BANQUET ROOM.

At 5:30 Thursday evening sixty-two alumni and guests of Dickinson college, Carlisle, assembled to enjoy the festivities of their annual banquet in the I. O. O. F. banquet room.

Rev. James B. Stein, acting as toast master, called upon President George Edward Reed to respond to the toast, "Old Dickinson" Then "Dickinson and the Alumni" was responded to by Judge McEnally, of Clearfield, who will be honored by the college with the degree of L. L; D. at the coming commencement.

"The Fitting School and the College" was discussed by Rev. William Perry Eveland Ph. D., president of Dickinson seminary. "Methodism and her Colleges" was intrusted to the case of Bishob William F. McDowell than whom none is more able to tell. Rev. James M. Buckley, editor of the New York Christian Advocate, spoke of "Reminiscences of College Days." Dr. Henderson also addressed the assemblage.

The officers for the ensuing year are: President, Dr. C. T. Dunning; vice president, Dr. T. S. Wilcox; secretary, D. B. H. Mosser; treasurer, Rev. M. E. Swartz.

A Reluctant Sport.

A Denver hotel man tells the following story, and he says it's true: One day a bride and bridegroom from the country registered at the hotel.

"What are your rates for room and board for two?" asked the bridegroom.

"Six dollars," was the reply.

That was satisfactory, and the two were given a room. When they decided to leave, the bridegroom asked for his bill. It was $24. He was staggered.

"What!" he ejaculated. "Twenty-four dollars! That's an outrage. You said $6."

"Six dollars a day," came from the clerk—"six dollars a day."

"Six dollars a day!" the bridegroom almost shouted. "I thought you meant $6 a week!"

The clerk simply smiled. Finally the bridegroom paid over the money.

"Now," he said, calming down somewhat, "wait a minute. I want to go upstairs. Keep that money in your hand."

The clerk didn't understand, but he decided to humor the man. The latter soon returned with a camera. Aiming it at the clerk, he took a picture.

"This is the highest priced place I ever stopped at," he explained. "I just wanted a picture to show my friends that I was a real sport here in Denver."

Then he and his bride gathered up their telescopes and went out.—Denver Post.

Do You Open Your Mouth

Like a young bird and gulp down whatever food or medicine may be offered you? Or, do you want to know something of the composition and character of that which you take into your stomach whether as food or medicine?

Most intelligent and sensible people now-a-days insist on knowing what they employ whether as food or as medicine. Dr. Pierce believes they have a perfect right to insist upon such knowledge. So he publishes, broadcast and on each bottle-wrapper, what his medicines are made of and verifies it under oath. This he feels he can well afford to do because the more the ingredients of which his medicines are made are studied and understood the more will their superior curative virtues be appreciated.

For the cure of woman's peculiar weaknesses, irregularities and derangements, giving rise to frequent headaches, backache, dragging-down pain or distress in lower abdominal or pelvic region, accompanied, ofttimes, with a debilitating, pelvic, catarrhal drain and kindred symptoms of weakness, Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is a most efficient remedy. It is equally effective in curing painful periods, in giving strength to nursing mothers and in preparing the system of the expectant mother for baby's coming, thus rendering childbirth safe and comparatively painless. The "Favorite Prescription" is a most potent, strengthening tonic to the general system and to the organs distinctly feminine in particular. It is also a soothing and invigorating nervine and cures nervous exhaustion, nervous prostration, neuralgia, hysteria, spasms, chorea or St. Vitus's dance, and other distressing nervous symptoms attendant upon functional and organic diseases of the distinctly feminine organs.

A host of medical authorities of all the several schools of practice, recommend each of the several ingredients of which "Favorite Prescription" is made for the cure of the diseases for which it is claimed to be a cure. You may read what they say for yourself by sending a postal card request for a free booklet of extracts from the leading authorities, to Dr. R. V. Pierce, Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, Buffalo, N. Y., and it will come to you by return post.

Strange Story of a Dream.

A correspondent sends the following anecdote, or, as he calls it, "case of thought transference," which was told him by an eminent engineer, whose name we withhold: This well known engineer had been to Bulawayo on the occasion of the opening of the railway to that place. A friend who accompanied him on the occasion contracted enteric fever and died on the homeward voyage. Half an hour before he died his hair turned perfectly white. On arriving in England the engineer went to break the news to the young man's sister. He found that not only did the lady know of the death of her brother, but she knew the time and the circumstance of the hair turning white. The engineer was requested to break the news to the father and mother as gently as possible, but to say nothing of the hair turning white. After a journey of 100 miles he found that both father and mother, whom he saw separately, not only knew of the death of their son, but knew of his hair turning white at the time of his death. Each had had a dream, a vivid dream, at the moment of the death taking place, and each had kept his and her own counsel, and they had not spoken to each other of the dream.—London Mail.

The Old Feather Bed.

What has become of the old fashioned feather bed? We mean the kind so high it required the service of a step-ladder to climb into it? Did you ever climb into one of them when you were a kid and sink down, down, down, till you gasped and wondered when you would touch bottom and if you didn't need a life preserver? And do you remember how good it felt upon a cold morning when you poked your head from under the covers and saw the window panes frost covered? And do you remember how you used to climb out of its billows, half dress yourself, shivering, teeth chattering, run downstairs and steal behind the kitchen stove, half your clothes in your arms? And how good those griddlecakes and sausages smelled! Feathers may not be healthy to sleep on, as claimed by doctors, who probably never slept on them, but they seemed mighty good to the kid. Why doesn't somebody write a song about "The Old Feather Bed?"—Milwaukee Sentinel.

Legend of the White Sky Calf.

The Kiowa Indians have a queer story of the "white sky calf." According to the legend, that portion of the American desert was formerly very fertile, supporting large herds of pure white buffaloes, each having a black tail. These creatures were held sacred by the savages and never killed for any purpose. Finally an old medicine man, Ne-ka-ta-mah, vowed that he would have a tepee built from the sacred white skins. The chiefs of the tribe tried hard to dissuade him from the notion, but all to no purpose. He declared that he would commence to collect the skins on the morrow. During the night a great white light appeared in the sky and in its center a white buffalo calf. The calf slowly descended to the earth, took charge of the herds, leading them northward, and from that day to this the Kiowas have never seen a white buffalo.

Engraved Easter Eggs.

Engraving on eggs is a special art in South America. The tools used are extremely delicate, and the utmost precision must be used in the process. The varying depths of the engraved line give light and shade to the design, and the result of this pure line engraving on the smooth oval shell is surprisingly beautiful. On the first day of spring the Easter eggs are put on exhibition, and no store is too small and shabby, none too important and imposing to fail to have its stock of eggs ready. A popular design shows a map of South America on one side and on the other two clasped hands, with a liberty cap below and a rising sun above.—New York Tribune.

"Oh," he answered, "I just gave her the address of your club."—New York Press.

Given Up To Die

B. Spiegel, 1204 Virginia St., Evansville, Ind., writes: "For over five years I was troubled with kidney and bladder affections which caused me much pain and worry. I lost flesh and was all run down, and a year ago had abandon work entirely. I had three of the best physicians who did me no good and I was practically given up to die, Foley's Kidney Cure was recommended and the first bottle gave me great relief, and after taking the second bottle I was entirely cured." why not let it help you? Treasures Found in Our American Forests.

That our American forests abound in plants which possess the most valuable medicinal virtues is abundantly attested by scores of the most eminent medical writers and teachers of this and other countries. Even the untutored Indians had discovered the usefulness of many native plants before the advent of the white race. This information, imparted freely to the whites, led the latter to continue investigations until to-day we have a rich assortment of most valuable American medicinal roots.

Dr. Pierce, of Buffalo, N. Y., believes that our American forests abound in medicinal roots for the cure of most obstinate and fatal diseases, if we would properly investigate them, and, in confirmation of this conviction, he points with pride to the most marvelous cures effected by his "Golden Medical Discovery," which has proven itself to be the most efficient stomach tonic, liver invigorator, heart tonic and regulator, and blood cleanser known to medical science. Dyspepsia, or indigestion, torpid liver, functional and even valvular and other affections of the heart yield to its curative action.

The reason why "Golden Medical Discovery" cures these and many other affections, is clearly shown in a little book of extracts from the standard medical works which is mailed free to any address by Dr. R. V. Pierce, of Buffalo, N. Y., to all sending request for the same.

To aid in healing old sores, or ulcers, apply Dr. Pierce's All-Healing Salve to them while taking the "Golden Medical Discovery" to purify and enrich the blood.

Dr. Pierce's All-Healing Salve is cleansing and pain relieving. It destroys the bad odors arising from suppurating, or running, sores and puts them in the best possible condition for healing.

The "All-Healing Salve" is a superior dressing for all open, running, or suppurating, Sores or Ulcers. For healing open wounds, cuts and scratches it is unsurpassed.

If your medicine dealer does not have the "All-Healing Salve" in stock mail 50 cents in postage stamps to Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y., and you will receive it by return post.

In treating all open sores, or ulcers, boils, carbuncles and other swellings, it is important that Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery be taken persistently to purify the blood and thereby remove the cause of the trouble. It is in the blood that the great battle of health has to be fought. The ulcer and the sore are simply the scarlet flowers of disease, with roots running down into the blood. These roots must be eradicated or the disease will break out afresh. "Golden Medical Discovery" cleanses the blood of all foul and poisonous accumulations, pushes out the dead and waste matter, and thus purifies the entire life current. Disease in the flesh must die out when it is no longer fed by foul blood. "Golden Medical Discovery" effectively cures disease in the flesh by curing its cause in the blood.

Not less marvelous, in the unparalleled cures it is constantly making of woman's many peculiar affections, weaknesses and distressing derangements, is Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, as is amply attested by thousands of unsolicited testimonials contributed by grateful patients who have been cured by it of catarrhal pelvic drains, painful periods, irregularities, prolapsus and other displacements caused by weakness, ulceration of uterus and kindred affections, often after many other advertised medicines and physicians had failed.

Nursing mothers and over-burdened women in all stations of life, whose vigor and vitality may have been undermined and broken-down by overwork, exacting social duties, the too frequent bearing of children, or other causes, will find in Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription the most potent, invigorating, restorative strength-giver ever devised for their special benefit. Nursing mothers will find it especially valuable in sustaining their strength and promoting an abundant nourishment for the child. Expectant mothers too will find it a priceless boon to prepare the system for baby's coming and rendering the ordeal comparatively painless. It can do no harm in any state, or condition of the female system.

Delicate, nervous, weak women, who suffer from frequent headaches, backache, dragging-down distress low down in the abdomen, or from painful or irregular monthly periods, gnawing or distressed sensation in stomach, dizzy or faint spells, see imaginary specks or spots floating before eyes, have disagreeable pelvic catarrhal drain, prolapsus, anteversion or retroversion or other displacements of womanly organs, from weakness of parts, will, whether they experience many or only a few of the above symptoms, find relief and a permanent cure by using faithfully, and fairly persistently, Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription.

Both the above mentioned medicines are wholly made up from the glycerie extracts of native, medicinal roots. The processes employed in their manufacture were original with Dr. Pierce, and they are carried on by skilled chemists and pharmacists with the aid of apparatus and appliances specially designed and built for this purpose. Both medicines are entirely free from alcohol and all other harmful, habit-forming drugs. A full list of their ingredients is printed on each bottle-wrapper.

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets cure constipation. Constipation is the cause of many diseases. Cure the cause and you cure the disease. Easy to take as candy

Senator Bate's Authority.

The late Senator William B. Bate of Tennessee was a major general in the Confederate army and never quite reconciled himself to the defeat of the south. Soon after he came to the senate he formulated a set of rules which he called "Rules for my proper legislative guidance." Whenever a proposition came up about which he was undecided he would take the printed slip containing these rules from his pocket and study it carefully.

"Bate," said a colleague one day, "what is that slip of paper to which you refer so frequently?"

"That," said Senator Bate, "is a little reminder of my belief on constitutional questions."

"Where did you get it? Think it out yourself?"

"No, suh," replied Bate, with much dignity; "I found most of those immortal truths in the constitution of the Confederate States of America."—Saturday Evening Post.

Cash or Credit.

Women should not get credit. Neither should men. Cash is the cure. Tradesmen maybe would have a bad time for six or twelve months, and many a lady would have to "lie low," but in the end we would get both our trade and our money, and she would get her dress and at far less cost.—London Opinion.

A Bad Case.

"What's the matter, dear?" asked the doctor's wife. "Are you worried about Mr. Poorley's case?"

"Yes," replied the doctor.

"And is there no hope?"

"Very little. He says he doesn't expect to leave enough to pay more than one-third of my bill."—Answers.

Plaster of Paris Bananas.

Bunches of bananas that are absolutely unfit for food hang out in front of the wholesale produce commission houses. Some of them have remained there until they have grown rusty with age.

"Couldn't get a finer looking bunch than that," said one of the dealers the other day, "even if it is plaster of paris. We used to put out the real article for a sign, but the peddlers who came down here had a way of pulling one or two out of the bunch that happened to be hanging there on the hook. The small boys, too, had a way of making a grab for a banana or two. By the time the bunch was on duty under the awning for an hour it was no longer presentable to the aesthetic sense. So we began to cultivate the make believe article, which is not quite so palatable, but just as good for advertising. And even at that some youngster in his haste will grab plaster of paris fruit and get away with it before he realizes that he has made off with something bad for his digestion."—New York Herald.

A Meal of Locusts.

In the West Indies the negroes eat freely of the big grub found in palm trees. The fat, white morsel, which they call "grugru," is not cooked or salted. The aborigines of Australia live almost entirely on a butterfly known as the bugong. The flies appear in batches on the rocks, and the natives smother them with smoke from fires built below. It is said that a Hottentot, with an appetite made sharp by the simple life, can devour 300 fat locusts at a sitting and feel better satisfied than if he had paid $8 for a ten course dinner. The Arabs dry the locusts and pulverize them into flour for breadmaking purposes. The Moors make a stew of them, and after boiling in water for a few minutes they are eaten with salt, pepper and vinegar. The locusts found in Central Africa are enormous, and the native negroes cut them in two and fry them in fat and find them not only appetizing, but nourishing. A flight of these big locusts is a matter of tribal thanksgiving.

Put on More Than the Saddle.

A cookery teacher was giving a lesson to a class of children and questioning them on the joints of mutton. The neck, shoulder, leg and loin had been mentioned.

"Now," said the teacher, "there is another joint no one has mentioned. Come, Mary, I know your father is a groom; what does he often put on a horse?"

"A dollar each way, miss," was the unexpected answer.—Cassell's Saturday Journal.

COBBLER PUTS LIFE INTO ASHES.

Backed by Dr. H. K. Hoy Formerly of Bellefonte.

Altoona—John Ellmore, an inventive shoemaker, whose worldly possessions in his cobbler's shop and his home would not bring $200 on the block, has within his grasp a discovery which may bring him millions, and restrict the coal output of the United States. Although the Pennsylvania Railroad officials profess indifference, it is known that if Ellmore's discovery comes into general use the present price of bituminous coal cannot be maintained.

Ellmore, it is stated, has succeeded in producing a compound which revivifies or recreates the combustible element in common coal ashes, at the same time creating a heat of greater intensity than that evolved from the highest grade of soft coal when fanned by a forced draught. In an ordinary cellar furnace, six parts of coal ashes and one part of coal all saturated with the cobbler's mysterious solution, produced a white hot fire, whose caloric was more intense after it had been burning two hours than it was at the end of the first hour.

Two teaspoonsful of Ellmore's compound, costing 25 cents, dissolved in three gallons of water, is claimed to be sufficient to treat three-quarters of a ton of coal ashes mixed with a quarter of a ton coal, and will bring out more heat and evolve it for a longer period than one ton of pure coal, bituminous or anthracite. So convinced is Dr. H. K. Hoy, formerly of Bellefonte, now one of the leading practitioners of Altoona, that Ellmore's secret is very valuable, that he has agreed to back the manufacture of the compound and to enlist capital to produce it on a large scale.

MISS BLANCHARD IN BALTIMORE.

Showing Home Made Baskets—Society Interested in Sale.

Society is much interested in the sale of baskets, which opened Saturday and will continue a couple of days at the Professional Building, on North Charles street. The sale is being held under the auspices of the Basket Shop of Bellefonte, Pa., which is run by Miss Mary Miles Blanchard and Miss Adelaide Merriman, both of whom are well known in this city. The baskets are all handmade and are of imported reed. The young ladies also dye the reeds themselves with vegetable dyes so that they will not fade if put in the sun. There were many unique designs in waste baskets for offices and private homes, hanging baskets, jardiniers, fruit baskets, covered pottery and glass sewing baskets. They are all very artistic, many being made after old English patterns. There was one large darning basket, such as great-grandmother must have used nearly a century ago, in brown, shading to a rich mahogany. Some of the baskets are made after patterns of old heirlooms lent to these young ladies, and any of the designs can be made to order in any color, solid or shaded.

A large number of ladies visited the sale Saturday and a number of orders were taken, as well as baskets sold. Miss Blanchard is spending the week in Baltimore to see that the orders are taken correctly and is being assisted at the sale by Miss Dunott and Miss Jane Pitts.—Baltimore American.

William B. Lyons Seriously Injured.

On Wednesday afternoon about 3:30 William Lyons who is quarry foreman at the Armor Farm quarries, a branch of the American Lime and Stone Co., with a gang of men took refuge in the scale room until after a blast would be shot off that had been lighted. The explosion was terrific and rocks as large as a cook stove flew in every direction. One large stone passed through the scale room and struck Mr. Lyons on the breast and hip. He was seriously injured and taken to his home on Howard street. It is feared that the lower portion of his body is paralyzed from the stroke. It is sincerely hoped that his injuries will not prove fatal and that he will soon be able to mingle among his many friends again.
